JONES enviro-color™ yarns are spun with a blend of recycled post consumer RPET and recycled post industrial fibers. RPET fiber is produced by processing used soda bottles. The bottles are ground into pellets which become feed stocks for extruding polyester fibers. With our enviro-color™ yarns you are not limited to a single shade of foam green; we spin yarns with blue, green, orange, red and yellow RPET fiber to create the shades in every one of our economy and premium blend yarn groups. The enviro-color™ product line includes economy and premium cotton blends, premium rayon blends and our AM™-anti-microbial yarns. Although we have used recycled fiber in our floor-care yarns for over 75 years; the enviro-color™ yarns is our first products to contain recycled post consumer waste

JONES commitment to eco-engineering impacts every segment of our yarn product line. Active research and development projects are evaluating a variety of recycled post consumer fiber sources including reclaimed apparel, recycled absorbent nonwovens and other conventional textile structures.

Industry expectations for product performance, consistency, quality and value are the target characteristics that we use to benchmark our product development. We understand that effective and economical cleaning should be our focus. JONES remains committed to the floor-care industry.
